Mike Gorman started his career at the Iowa Department of Transportation after receiving his Construction Engineering degree from Iowa State University. While at the Iowa DOT, he was drawn to the relatively fast pace and human element of traffic engineering and transportation planning, making it his 38-year professional focus. Before moving to the private sector, he held public sector engineering positions for the City of Casper, Wyoming and City of Omaha.

Mike's current position began with the former HWS Consulting Group as Transportation Services Manager. In 2010, he helped guide the company through a successful merger with Alfred Benesch & Company, which is headquartered in Chicago. Mike serves on the Benesch Board as well as Executive Vice President and Great Plains Regional Manager. He oversees all business development and operations involving the planning and design of transportation facilities in Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Colorado.

Alfred Benesch & Company employs more than 600 professional and support personnel including engineers, planners, environmental scientists, construction managers, landscape architects, surveyors and designers who are rated among the highest in their professions. Engineering News Record consistently ranks Benesch among the Top 500 Design Firms in the United States. Headquartered in Chicago, Illinois, Benesch operates 30 offices in fifteen states, including Colorado, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, and Wisconsin.
