My name is Ben Jambor. I am a Construction Representative for Alfred Benesch and Company (Benesch) in Omaha, NE. I started with Benesch in 2005 as an intern while pursuing my degree in Construction Management from the University of Nebraska Omaha. As an intern I worked as a technician in the materials testing laboratory. Upon graduation in 2010, I was hired full time and started working towards my current position. I am currently working as a project coordinator/manager for our Construction Engineering team. I have been engaged in several different roadway construction projects ranging from grading and materials testing, traffic signals, asphalt resurfacing, concrete paving, and bridge construction.

When I'm not at work, I spend most of my time at home with my wife, Amanda, and our two four-legged children, Major Lazer and Gus, who are pit bull rescues. As a typical Nebraska native, I enjoy spending my college football Saturdays tailgating and watching the Cornhuskers. I was also born and raised a Kansas City Royals and Chiefs fan. When I get the opportunity, I also like to play golf.
